Conservation

"The Greatest Good to the Greatest Number"

We hear much nowadays about conservation, efficiency, intensive farming—and so on. But we do not hear much about what all this leads to—waking up all the millions of our brain cells, instead of thinking narrowly along one line.

Intensive Living

Just think money, or any one thing, and only certain fibers of your mind are brought into play.

Diversify your thinking—and do more of it—and that magnificent brain of yours will respond as does a flower to culture.

We heard of a family two years in Paris, who said they did not visit the Louvre—but understood there were a lot of pictures there.

If one only does easy streaky thinking—following the line of least resistance, the brain is dwarfed, just as one can kill half one's lungs by lazy breathing.

So a store dwells its opportunity that does not continually work for the furthering of its usefulness in the community. Even though started as a personal utility, a store that grows has responsibility thrust upon it. There must be different gauges to measure the responsibility of a little store and a big one.

Judge this store by the use of its powers to serve.

Green and Scarlet the Cry in Sport Coats

If you were abroad this summer you saw, of course, the blaze of color along the European esplanades and beaches. Here a woman in a little coat of vivid orange, there a rich purple, while of greens, rose, blues and gold shades there were plenty. It was the same way on the steamer returning home. Smart women slipped the gaily colored coats over their pretty frocks.

The fad has reached America and the coats are here. Young women are buying them for tennis, for school, for golf, for motor-ing, and they will be much in evidence at the football games. They are made of astrakhan cloth, smart, belted style. Priced $12.50 to $20.

Postmaster Jones' Bible Class Guests of Teacher

MEMBERS OF BIBLE CLASS AT FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH.

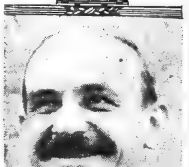

Nearly 200 young men, who a year ago had given up attending Sunday school, imagining that they were becoming too old for that sort of thing, but who after meeting Hollis H. Jones, recently named postmaster of Atlanta, were made to think differently and promptly became members of his Bible class at the First Baptist church, were the guests of honor at a dinner served at the Hotel Atlanta last Friday night, their teacher, Hollis H. Jones, being host. When Mr. Jones took over the class last January it had but five members. Mr. Jones at once started out to win pupils. The present enrollment is 185 young men. The postmaster recently declared that he would rather resign his office than give up the class, for he declared, "they are all my boys."

Mail Distributing Cabinet Invented by Atlanta Man

That it has remained for an Atlanta to solve the economic problem of handling the ever-increasing mail and to make room in postoffices for the parcel post business is the belief of many who have examined a mail distributing cabinet invented by W.

through slots directly in front of him, and the surface of the cabinet is only two feet long by three and a half feet wide. The letters are taken out from the rear of the cabinet.

Through the automatic saving of hand and body motion which the new cabinet will make possible, it is estimated that from 20 to 25 per cent more mail will be sorted and the clerks will be able to do much more work in less time.

In a way the new cabinet is arranged so much like the old ones that clerks familiar with the present system will not require much effort on the part of the clerks.

The inventor, who is a mechanical and electrical engineer, has made a model of the cabinet, which he is now showing to the postoffice officials at Washington and secured the right to use the name of "Postmaster's Mail Distributing Cabinet."

Many clerks have already seen the model and believe that the new cabinet will be given in the near future.

Under the system now in use, a clerk stands before a cabinet some ten feet long and places letters in pigeon holes in front of him to be delivered to him. His hands are forced to travel the length of the cabinet to deliver the mail. The new cabinet is so arranged that he can drop the letters

"IGNORANCE OF LAW" CHARGED TO PRESTON

Judicial Coercion and Unfair Tactics Alleged in Petition for Habeas Corpus.

In a writ of habeas corpus filed by Attorney William Smith Saturday afternoon with the superior court to secure the release of Andrew Morton and Sam Holder, two negroes charged with blind tugging, Recorder Pro Tem Preston is charged with "judicial coercion, unfair tactics and gross ignorance of the law."

Several days ago the negroes were arrested on a charge of "traveling blind tugging." The master of the vessel in which they were arrested, the "H. H. Preston," was submitted at their hearing in the superior court. It is alleged, and stated that he would change the charge "keeping liquor on board" for a "gross violation of the law."

To this Attorney Smith objected on the ground that they could not legally be charged with a second crime before the trial of the first was completed or acquittal of a conviction.

Judge Preston, however, could not see the error of his own course. He ordered that the negroes be held in custody until the second trial, which he set for Monday morning.

Judge Bell will hear the habeas corpus proceedings argued Monday at 10 o'clock.

WHEN PARTIES CHANGE PLACES

By Clark Howell.

Several years ago the fight against Canamism began and insurgency in both parties generally showed its head. The Canamists, hitherto the events as the symptoms of a realignment of political forces in this country. Since then the situation has become further confused by the reaction of the Roosevelt wing of the Republican party, but in the more fundamental aspects the prophecy is yet to be fulfilled. In a recent issue of Collier's

Mark Sullivan, the political expert, states that realignment is steadily on the way.

It is when Congress, in regular session, attacks the problem of the trusts that

Mr. Sullivan thinks the old parties will fall to pieces. The Democratic caucus will lose its solidarity, he believes, and as soon as this happens, the very well known fact that break-up of parties which is the necessary preliminary to a new line-up in the United States, a normal division between men whose minds and interests are conservative and those whose minds and interests are liberal.

Other political authorities are echoing this sentiment. The Constitution believes it is yet too early to say whether the question of the trusts will bring a parting of the ways. It is, indeed, yet too early to say that the division is coming during the Wilson administration. Had Mr. Wilson failed in leadership there is every probability that a foundation for party realignment would have now been laid. He has, on the contrary, shown a real command of his party and an extraordinary ability to enforce discipline. Another fact worth considering is that the divergences in the caucus and upon the floor have been more explosive than serious. They have been only such quarrels as might be expected within any healthy party in power. With the blowing off of steam all hands settled down to their regular allegiance.

We are commenting in this vein, not to deny the impenability of a new party line-up, but as showing when it comes, and we believe it should be one which is clearly and healthily party in power. With the blowing

What Thirty Bright, Ambitious Girls Are Doing At Rabun Gap School in the Georgia Highlands

They Have Their Own Dairy, Raise Their Own Poultry and Know How to Do Scientific Farming—They Study Gardening, Domestic Science, Needlework, Basketry and Music, in Addition to a Regular Academic Course.

BY ISMA DOOLY.

When the thirty girls of the Rabun Gap Industrial school posed for their pictures in the open they did not mind the glare of the sunlight; they had no fear of taw or frostbite; they defied these dangers. They rarely worry about their hats, yet I never saw prettier, clearer complexions, brighter eyes and finer hair.

They wore the dark blue skirts, white muslin blouses, which they had made themselves, for these clever girls are taught to sew. They make the boys' shirts for them, and more than that, they iron those shirts after they are laundered. A negro woman is employed to do the washing for the boys. The girls do their own laundry work, the laundry in the basement being comfortably suited up for that purpose.

Entering the school room after breakfast, I was impressed with the excellent ventilation, the light coming from windows on two sides of the room which in dimensions was larger than the school rooms in Atlanta's graded schools. There were only twenty-five pupils in each school room, for the energetic young teacher, Miss Thurmond, explained that no teacher could do justice to more than twenty-five pupils at a time.

Beside the academic course being taught the girls, the curriculum, that followed by the common and high school grades, supplementary branches are taught, including winter gardening, domestic science, and home administration, sewing, needle work and basketry, mountain settlement and mission work, and school music. Miss Shirley is the teacher in the department of domestic science which is a knowledge applied as it is taught.

The students of the morning classes have their study period before the hour that they become the workers of the day, while those who work in the morning have their classes in the afternoon. There are recesses for all three times a day, beside the hour at luncheon or the noon day meal, and during the recesses, recreation carries the boys and girls into many a lot of door games.

A bell at 11:30 and once at 6:30 call the boys from the field to give them time for refreshing themselves before the usual and when the school family assembles in the commodious dining room for meals, they are the happiest of young people.

TAKE TURN ABOUT.

A teacher presides at the several tables and Mr. and Mrs. Ritchie at the main tables. According to the good system inaugurated by Mrs. Ritchie, who especially directs the life of the girls, they take turn about waiting on the tables. "How," said one of them, a most cheerful and efficient person, "can we learn to direct work in our own homes when we get them, if we do not learn how ourselves?"

And this fine principle prevailed through every thing the girls did.

A young woman not yet eighteen, who two years ago when she came to the school knew nothing about domestic work, knew nothing about cooking, or any of the arts of making a home, was the head cook for the entire school. She had four girls under her direction, and each month of the year there are the groups of girls who do the cooking for the entire school. There are the helpers among the novices, and they vie with one another in becoming experts. They are taught the food values, and market values, and the meals prepared reflected this knowledge and a knowledge of good cooking. I have never tasted better fried chicken, and corn fritters; better rolls, biscuits, and light bread. The vegetables were all well cooked, and at each meal there were potatoes prepared in the various wholesome ways. Sweet potatoes of delicious kind were on the dinner menu, and the tomatoes, great big juicy ones, made the salad course. Apple pies of the finest kind were among the desserts, and the buttered bread had for breakfast were the good old-fashioned kind, a rarity now anywhere.

There were preserves served at the evening meal, and with a dash of table linen and appointment, a pleasant service, and general air of ease which indicated that every girl there was trained, and that every one having there would not only be well to do in domestic arts as made the directing influence. In the department of the dairy, a young woman, a student of the school for two years, and the head of the department under Mrs. Ritchie's direction. She has charge of everything pertaining to the cows used for the school dairy. From the hour of 8:30 in the morning when the cows are milked, the churning is done, the butter made, she keeps her eye on the dairy work, and is considered now a veritable little expert in this all important part of the farm home life.

And with the same system are the chickens looked after, a most business-like young woman giving me much valuable information about poultry and eggs. She had the care of two hundred hens, she told me, with always the assistance of several classmates. The chickens had been the best she had ever eaten, and I was prepared to believe it when I saw them. Her ambition she confided to me, was to be the head of a poultry farm some day, and she was going to make the start the moment she got back to her mountain home.

HAPPIEST GROUP IN THE SCHOOL.

After breakfast the second morning of my visit to the school, I heard such sweet voices and cheerful singing. I wondered where the music room was. They were the voices of the housewives in the kitchen, I was told, and I went down to see them. There they were, four of them, the happiest group in the school. One had her hands buried deep in the dough for the dinner bread, and I saw the beans being made ready for dinner, the same beans five pretty girls were stringing the day before, when we arrived. And passing the dining room I saw the breakfast dishes being cleaned away, and preparing being made for dinner. A pretty girl had come in from the garden, her arms full of cosmos blooms and golden-rod with which she filled the vases ornamenting the center of each table.

Out in the yard, the prevailing genius of the dairy was shining her milk pails, and everywhere I turned I saw a pretty girl engaged in some form of household work.

In the afternoon, I went to ride and to meet the mother of Andrew Ritchie, who though seventy-six years of age, still manages her own little farm and looks after the home in which she lives, with a widowed daughter. Straight, alert, and majestic in her bearing, this wonderful mountain woman, the mother of four stalwart sons, was gathering Irish potatoes in her garden, when she heard her son's voice and came to greet us. She brushed her gray hair back from her almost featureless forehead, greeted her guests cheerfully, and asked, "Now, Andy, can't you hold together during winter months?"

The nursery herd the girls have taken charge of. The good cows, upon which have been thrust the care of two calves instead of one are herded here. And great was the pleasure of the girls when the nursery herd picture was to be taken; they went out and themselves summoned the four mother cows and the eight frisky calves.

They explained to me the relation of the nursery herd to cattle raising. There was not any part of the farm work with which they were not familiar.

SHE KNOWS ALL ABOUT FARMING.

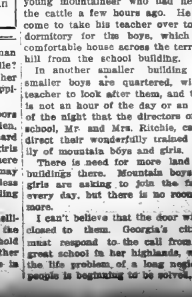

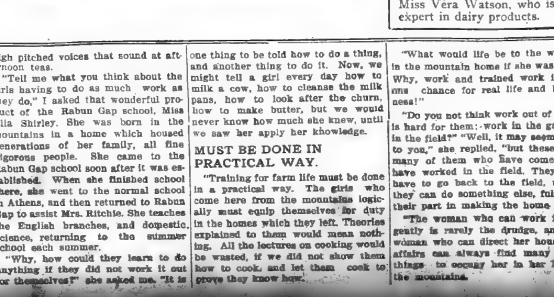

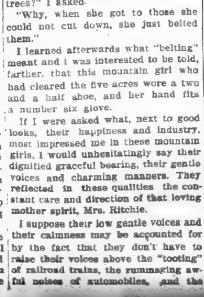

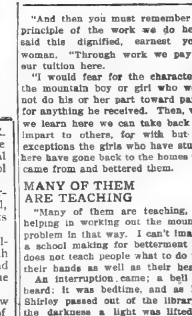

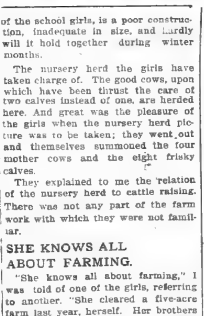

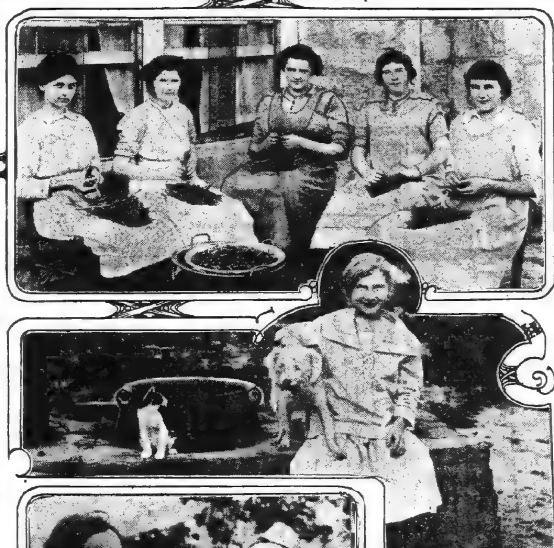

"She knows all about farming," I was told of one of the girls, referring to another. "She cleared a five-acre farm last year, herself. Her brothers helped her." "How could she cut down trees?" I asked.

"Why, when she got to those she could not cut down, she just belted them."

I learned afterwards what "belting" meant and I was interested to be told, further, that this mountain girl who had cleared the five acres were a two and a half acre, and her hand fits a number six glove.

If I were asked what, next to good most impressed me in these mountain girls, I would unhesitatingly say their dignified graceful bearing, their gentle voices and charming manners. They reflected in these qualities the constant care and direction of that loving mother spirit, Mrs. Ritchie.

I suppose their low gentle voices and their calmness may be accounted for by the fact that they don't have to make their voices above the "roosting" of railroad trains, the rummaging and whistles of automobiles, and the of the school girls, is a poor construction, and Andy, can't you hold together during winter months?

Second, group of girls stilling beans and little Ruth Ritchie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew J. Ritchie, the Lunders of the school.

At the right, Mrs. Andrew J. Ritchie, the mother spirit of the school. At the bottom, Miss Vera Watson, who is an expert in dairy products.

"And then you must remember the principle of the work we do here," said this dignified, earnest young woman. "Through work we pay for our tuition here."

"I would fear for the character of the mountain boy or girl who would not do his or her part toward paying for anything he received. That, what we learn here we can take back and impart to others, for with few exceptions the girls who have studied here have gone back to the homes they came from and bettered them."

MANY OF THEM ARE TEACHING

"Many of them are teaching, and helping in working out the mountain problem in that way. I can't imagine a school making for betterment that does not teach people what to do with their hands as well as their heads."

An interruption came; a bell was heard. It was bedtime, and as Miss Shirley passed out of the library in the darkness a light was lifted and the lantern showed the face of the young mountaineer who had herded the cattle a few hours ago. He had come to take his teacher over to the dormitory for the boys, which is a comfortable house across the terrace hill from the school building.

In another smaller building the smaller boys are quartered, with teacher to look after them, and there is not an hour of the day or an hour of the night that the directors of the school, Mr. and Mrs. Ritchie, cannot direct their wonderfully trained family of mountain boys and girls.

There is need for more land and buildings there. Mountain boys and girls are asking to join the family every day, but there is no room for more.

I can't believe that the door will be closed to them. Georgia's citizens must respond to the call from this great school for her highlands, where the life problem, of a long neglected people is beginning to be solved.

"What would life be to the woman in the mountain home if she was idle? Why, work and trained work is her chance for real life and happiness!"

"Do you not think work out of doors is hard for them? work in the garden, in the field?" "Well, it may seem hard to you," she replied, "but these girls many of them who have come here have worked in the field. They have to go back to the field, unless they can do something else, fulfilling their part in making the home."

"The woman who can work intelligently is rarely the frugal, and the woman who can direct her household affairs can always find many other things to occupy her in her life in the mountains."

MUST BE DONE IN PRACTICAL WAY.

"Training for farm life must be done in a practical way. The girls who come here from the mountains locally must equip themselves for duty in the homes which they left. Theoretical explanations to them would mean nothing. All the lectures on cooking would be wasted, if we did not show them how to cook, and let them cook to prove they know how."

one thing to be told how to do a thing, and another thing to do it. Now, we might tell a girl every day how to milk a cow, how to clean the milk pans, how to look after the churn, how to make butter, but we would never know how much she knew, until we saw her apply her knowledge."

... isn't it hard to tell exactly which man can be classed as good and which one as bad? It was said once of a man whose rascalities were famous over two continents that he had committed every conceivable crime except the few that led to jail or gallows. It is true that it is impossible to draw the line between convicts and the rest of the world. The warden of a big penitentiary told the writer that it was his belief that there were just two classes of men who were generally to be found inside his walls. The exceptionally bad and the exceptionally good.

There is a certain character who is so exceptionally good, according to the usually accepted standards, that he could be held up as a model by every teacher in the country. He doesn't smoke, drink, chew, swear; goes out at nights, goes to theaters (not even picture shows), saves his money, is a reliable employee (he is a bookkeeper) and in other ways appears to

But unless it was to his own advantage. He is suffering under that delusion which commands most respect in the world which is a common delusion in these United States. He doesn't do all the sinful things because they are expensive, not because they are sinful. But the fact remains that they are sinful and No. 2 does do them while No.

The proper way to finish this inconsequential effort would be by quoting R. L. Stevenson, Bobby Burns, Omar Khayyam or any one of half a dozen others. Pick out your own quotation and finish the thing to suit yourself.

The Guest Room Decorated in Cross Stitch

A NOVICE as well as an experienced needlewoman should be able to work the designs on these different articles. Cross stitch is so easily done and takes so little time that a most attractive bedroom set can be made with little cost of either time or labor.

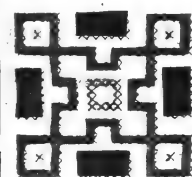

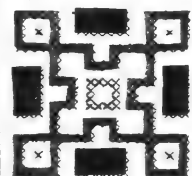

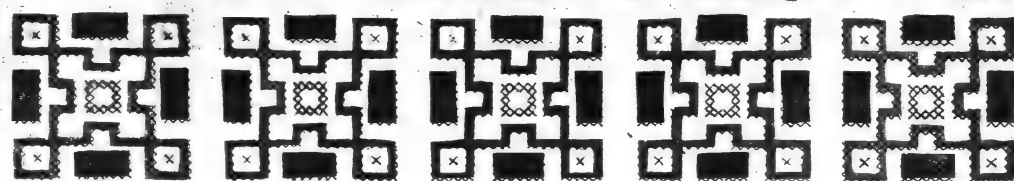

These sketches are merely suggestions to show the variety of ways these designs may be used. The same color scheme should be used throughout, however, as there can be no beauty without harmony of line and color.

The colors used here are lavender as the key note with touches of green and yellow, though that is a matter of taste.

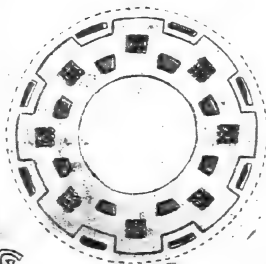

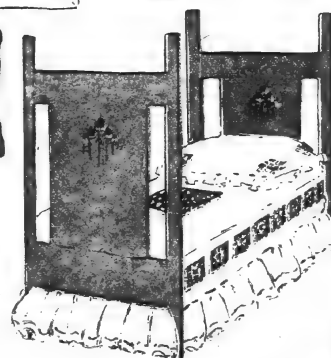

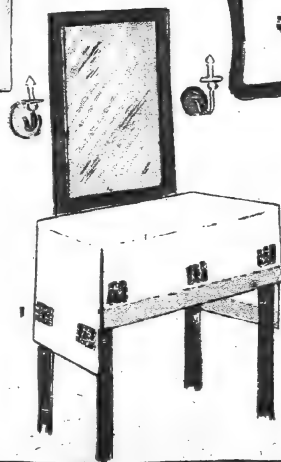

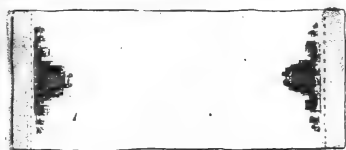

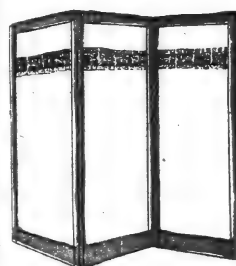

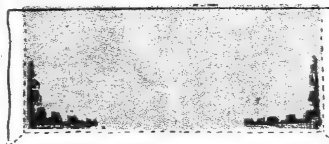

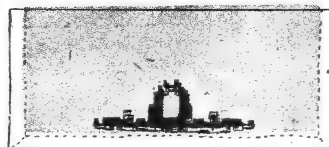

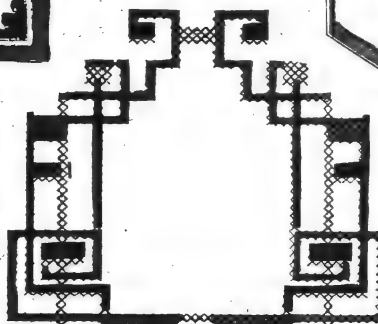

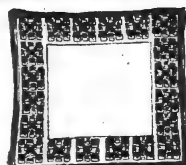

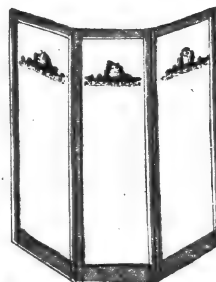

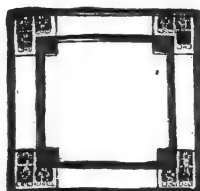

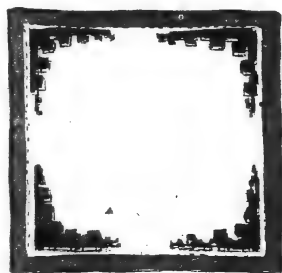

The side hangings of the windows may be of lavender silk in a plain tone, and the ones used next to the glass may be of scrim or other good cross stitch material.

The frame for the screens can be made by a good carpenter. The material should first be embroidered and then tacked in place.

The lamp and candle shades should be embroidered first, then sewed or glued to the frames.

"Something for Nothing"

I wish someone would read and explain the almost universal human failing of expecting to get without giving an equivalent. I'll take of my hat, bow no more, and admit that I am a human being.

"You can't get something for nothing" is one of the most common of all current expressions. You hear it on the lips of people of all classes, and, unless their hearts, they believe it, too.

You believe it?

And yet, for some reason I cannot explain, we are all of us all the time trying in one way or another, to get something for nothing.

The man who resorts to stimulants to bring to him a momentary relief, is getting something for nothing.

COCHRAN, OF MERCER, STAR OF BOTH ELEVEN

Jackets Work Forward Pass Successfully—Line Fails to Show Strength With Regulars Missing.

Fighting gamely and severely from the first whistle until the last, the Mercer Baptists went down in defeat before the better Tech Yellow Jackets at Grant field Saturday afternoon by a 33 to 0 count.

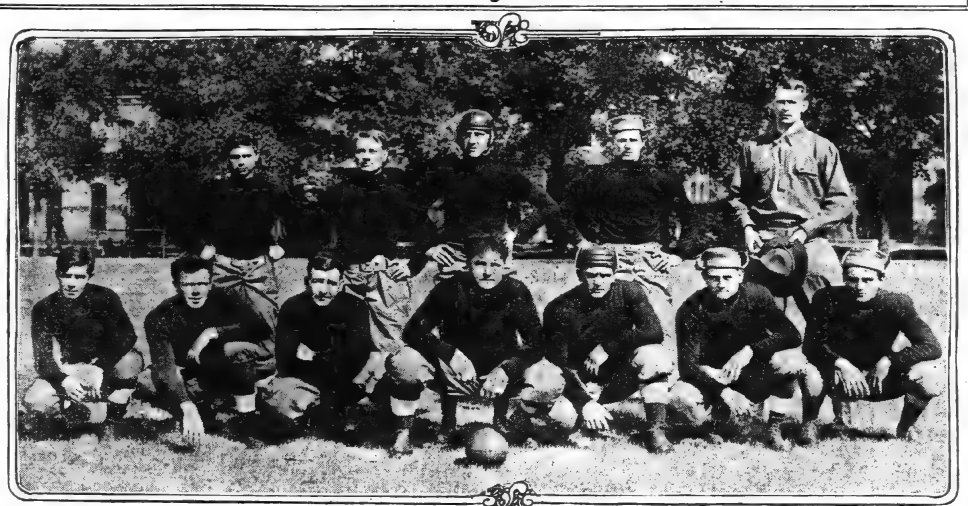

The Jackets fought bitterly. They were not a novel event in the football line that they have the spirit and the heart that they possess. The Jackets were not a novel event in the football line that they have the spirit and the heart that they possess.

But they were outclassed in weight, speed and knowledge of the game, so much so that the Yellow Jackets made an attempt to start their own star players, and three others only played a brief period during the game.

The Jackets showed a marked improvement in their offensive game, their interference on end runs being the best that Tech has seen in years. They got off their plays quickly, and the entire team was something to be proud of.

By Dick Jensen. Fighting gamely and severely from the first whistle until the last, the Mercer Baptists went down in defeat before the better Tech Yellow Jackets at Grant field Saturday afternoon by a 33 to 0 count.

Effective, Economical Complexion Beautifier

(Gull's Off, In The Clubwomen.) One reason is so strongly recommended because it is that it really takes the place of several different cosmetics. It saves time, money and space. It is better than any cleansing cream, better than any make-up cream, better than any rouge for accomplishing the results for which each article is used. It is a real skin beautifier. It is an old, tried and true remedy. It is a skin whitener. It is a skin beautifier. It is a skin whitener. It is a skin beautifier.

Three Splendid Games Booked For Eastern Gridirons This Week

Princeton-Dartmouth, Pennsylvania-Carlisle and Harvard-Penn State Games Should Furnish Considerable Dope on Strength of Three of the "Big Six" Elevens.

By Edward R. Washell.

Philadelphia, Pa., October 18.—(Special)—Intercollegiate football of the "Big Six" variety will begin next Saturday, when Princeton plays Dartmouth at the "tavern" gridiron. Yale will be the one big game of the day and the first contest in what is virtually a round robin tournament for supreme honors on the gridiron. In the absence of an intercollegiate schedule by which all of the big teams would play each other, this is the only method to determine the ranking of each eleven. The other members of the "Big Six" play each other in sufficient combination to enable one to determine what team deserves the championship.

Next to the Dartmouth-Princeton game, the two big contests of the day will be those between Pennsylvania and the Indiana and Harvard and Pennsylvania State colleges. The Quakers are playing the Redmen a month earlier than usual, a change made necessary by the addition of Dartmouth to the regular schedule. Pennsylvania State college is playing Harvard for the first time, an opportunity which was offered when Storch college, which was to have played the Crimson on this date, was obliged to cancel the engagement because the team had disbanded.

It is almost impossible to form any opinion of the relative strength of the two elevens have not met since the same sport. There is likely to be much similarity to these two teams this year. Both are likely to be large and strong. Both have had fairly high records in playing all their dependence upon the center and the line. Princeton has the advantage, and a little better line, and the backfield Princeton is thought to have a little more speed and to excel in the end running and forward passing game. But the contest itself will be a hard one.

The game between Pennsylvania and the Carlisle Indians is likely to be of the spectacular type and just as exciting as that of last year when a football game could be quite as spectacular and full of thrills as a basketball game. From the first period until the last the lead alternated between the two teams, and it was always a spectacular play that caused the change of lead from one to the other. That game brought together the two greatest open field runners the game ever produced in Jim Thorpe, the Indian champion, and the Carlisle Indians, both of whom were at each other's elbow on the same class with the Indians.

The Indians have an unusual class in the way they play. In addition to securing revenue for last year's defeat, the Indians have been creditably looking their place on the schedule of the big teams. They have played games with Princeton, Yale or Harvard, and the only member of the "Big Six" with which they have not yet played is Penn State. The results of these games, however, may still give them a chance for their proper rating with Harvard, Yale and Princeton. They have already played Cornell and won by the score of 7 to 6. After their game with Pennsylvania next week they still have a game with Dartmouth, which is to be played in New York city on November 1.

Previous to year-to-year games every member of the "Big Six" has been defeated in one or more games. Yale was the only college able to reach the middle of October without being scored upon, but the Yale team was defeated by the Harvard team last week. The Harvard team was defeated by the Yale team last week. The Yale team was defeated by the Harvard team last week.

Prospects Bright at Harvard. Those who have seen all the big teams in action this year are quite unanimous in the opinion that, barring accidents and extraordinary efforts of the other teams, Harvard is the team to watch. The Harvard team is the team to watch. The Harvard team is the team to watch.

From end to end there is hardly a month earlier than usual, a change made necessary by the addition of Dartmouth to the regular schedule. Pennsylvania State college is playing Harvard for the first time, an opportunity which was offered when Storch college, which was to have played the Crimson on this date, was obliged to cancel the engagement because the team had disbanded.

Green King's Income. (From The Indianapolis News.) Monsieur Poincaré, president of the French republic, has recently revealed to King Constantine what Greece owes to France. In doing this he has had the delicacy not to mention to the king what he himself owes to France. The king is one of a number of little Greek despots that receive the bounty of the republic. When the Greeks offered the king a throne, the king refused. The king refused. The king refused.

Back to the Hermitage. (From The Chicago Record-Herald.) The Boston artist who has been playing the primitive man in the Matterwells for the past two months has emerged from his retreat and claims that his experiment has been a success. He began without clothing, food or equipment. He returned well-fed, sufficiently good shelter behind. During the experiment he did not encounter a single human being, and he considers he has proved that the modern man is just as able to do without the advantages of civilization.

Moose McCormick, of Giants, Champion Funny Man of Game

EDITOR'S NOTE—These incidents in the life of Moose McCormick, the pinch hitter of the Giants, may be timely in view of the fact that he will be making his debut about this week, and the Southern League in 1914.

By Irving Vanhook.

Harry McCormick, of the Giants, is the funniest man in baseball. He is better known as "Bull" and "Moose" McCormick, the somewhat homely appearance of which is more than compensated by his variety of disposition. "Bull" is also known for his remarkable ability to hit in the pinch, a thing that has kept him ahead of the New York club payroll for several years. That's another story.

McCormick never did give a serious thought to baseball. He just happened into it and happened to stay because he never happened to get out. That's the only story. The only thing for which he ever showed a fondness were funny things of the "dry" variety. He never went out of his way to draw a laugh in his college days, but at baseball, well as a fielder and runner he is a good player.

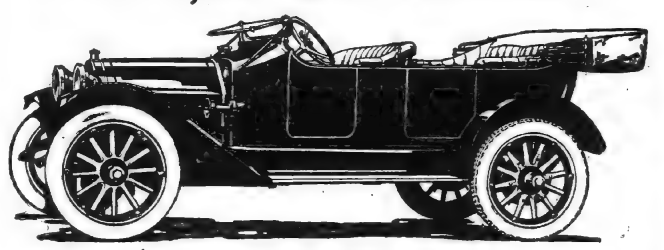

McCormick was located in Atlantic City, N. J., when he was first discovered by the Giants. He was playing for the Atlantic City club. He was playing for the Atlantic City club. He was playing for the Atlantic City club.

From 800 Cars Three Years Ago to 13,500 Cars This Year

The Paige Car began to attract attention three years ago. The company sold 800 cars. They were extra-good for the price.

Two years ago the public and dealers in general recognized the Paige "25" as great value at a thousand dollars. Sales jumped to about 3000 cars.

Last year—the 1913 season—the Paige was hailed everywhere as a sensational value. The factory could not fill one-third the orders. Thousands of purchasers had to be disappointed.

A letter just received from the factory brings good news for Paige purchasers. It says: "We hope to fill all orders during the 1914 season. With the new factory we will build 13,500 cars for the season."

OUR allotment out of this production is liberal, but it is NOT FLEXIBLE. We cannot deliver more cars than we GET. An order placed now, either for early or future deliveries, will assure you of YOUR Paige.

The demand for Paige cars is perfectly logical. Anyone who knows anything about automobiles can see that the Paige is full of extra value. That's why a lot of leading men and publications in the industry declared last spring that the prices would have to be raised.

What they said sounded all right, but it wasn't right, simply because they did not appreciate the economically advantageous conditions under which Paige cars are manufactured. They overlooked the fact that the Paige Company is carrying no load of bonds, no load of preferred stock, no expensive branches, no multiplicity of high-salaried officials. They overlooked the fact that the same executive organization, identical, which directed the manufacture and sale of 800 cars is now directing the manufacture and sale of many thousands of cars.

They overlooked the costs advantage of buying with cash. There are a lot of important manufacturing facts that they overlooked. And, meanwhile, the public has not overlooked the obvious real value of the Paige.

Paige cars really do give all the excellence of construction, completeness of equipment, size, power, style, and finish—all these qualities—that you find elsewhere only in cars costing several hundred dollars more.

When you come to see the Paige bring an automobile expert with you, if you aren't an expert yourself, and let him verify this statement.

Better Service Makes the Cartercar a Better Value!

When you pay-out your money you are not merely buying a motor car—you are buying motor car service. And it is very obvious that the car that will give the best service is the best value.

This is why the Cartercar satisfies its owners as well. It gives perfect service—over all roads—and for all drivers.

And the Cartercar gives better service than the ordinary car simply because it is made differently—strong where the gear car is weak—efficient where the gear car is inefficient. The gearless transmission makes the Cartercar reliable under all possible conditions. There is nothing to break—quite a contrast to the numerous complicated gears of the ordinary car.

A Cartercar will climb hills and go through mud and sand in a surprising manner. The tremendous leverage at low speed makes it almost impossible to stall the motor.

Modern in every way—equipped with all conveniences—and with this extra efficiency and reliability—surely you must consider the Cartercar if you would invest your money wisely. Ask for demonstration.

We have a most excellent proposition for dealers. Let us figure with you for the coming season.

Day of Illicit Distiller Who Once Flourished in Georgia Passing; John Ingram, Typical "Blockader," Tells of "Revenuers'" Coming

"For awhile Uncle Sam forgot to provide with schools, decent roads and the common things of life, so we figured we didn't owe him much."

"I can't see why it ain't just as right for a man to make his meal into whisky as it is for him to have it baked into pones."

"Things are looking up in the mountains and the best thing of it is the passing of old blockaders just like me."

By Maxwell Harvey Swain.
The day of the illicit distiller is past. There is no longer any of those banana-juice, grape-juice, or other palatable concoctions now served in the bars. The distiller has been banished to the Carolina hills. He has in the "corn locker." Today, following the lead of the federal revenue officers, an illicit still is all but buried under a pile of logs and brush, and the "blockader," in his Georgia outfit, is on the ground. The records of the United States court for this district show fewer and fewer distillers in the mountains. Men who in former years were known as "corn burners" are now right to make their corn into whiskey and sell it to the army and navy. The distiller is now made illegal in corn into meal.

It is a pity that the mountain distiller, touching upon his vested rights in the manufacture of his corn into whiskey, should be so easily digested. In fact it has sometimes been

He asked the men who and what they were doing. They displayed badges and uniforms and said they were federal officers. They told paw he was under arrest for carrying a dangerous weapon, a .38 caliber Smith & Wesson revolver whicky against the statute provided by the federal laws of the United States.

"Well, I guessed it was all right and then went back into the cabin saying he wanted to get his things and go home to his mountain with them. Mind you this was the first time in probably fifty years that anyone had ever molested him or taken anything from him."

"Well, paw took a long time in thinking about it. He decided that the revenuers got tired waiting they went inside the cabin to hustle paw up. It was a long time before paw came out. The way he had gone and how."

Reverners Were Sore

"The men who were there were sore as spurs for awhile and wanted to hange me as a witness, but maw she begged me to let her go."

off for the day but I was told to be ready to go down the mountain at any time as a witness—that was caught on film. Paw had to "hide out"—as we call it—until supplies along the little used trail ran out. The men were to wait for the men to arrive until the reverends left the hills. The men were to be ready to go back, knowing they were sort of marked men, kept quiet on with the "wild world" but that they were to be ready to do much more than make enough for their own needs.

I started moonshining when I was 16. I had a still in the back of the house and Uncle Ben and Uncle Hili. They were the best of friends. I would call it and keep the worm-water cool. I would take the worm-water in the spring and pour it over the stills of the copper worm about every five minutes. I would take the worm-water out and I learned the craft of the worm-water. I learned the craft of the worm-water.

"I blazed for years. Last winter I gave it up for good and all when the revenues got me. I used to make $100 a week, but I was broke. But having to hide out that way made me realize that I was a scoundrel. I found that my earnings were kind of like a gambler's. When I worked I made a lot of money, but when I was out, I was scarce.

More Money at 75 Cents

"You can believe it or not, but I have more money at 75 cents a day than I did when I was making $100 two whole years before trying to beat the law.

"My trial is coming up here on October 10. I don't know what the judge is making, as I have quit on October 1. I don't know what the jury is doing there at Blairsville, which is 100 miles from a railroad, and I'm going to keep my children in school like they are."

Summing it up—bad and large—they ain't no use in blockading t' days. I can't see why it ain't as much for a man to be his own master on whiskey as it is for him to have it baked into ponies, but it ain't here or there. What is it, surprised to see mountains raised, generation after generation raised the trade of blockading, giving up the law as laid down by the rulers.

Ugess its best that way, espec'ly, since these later days when the state and the government is mending to know we are alive. So long they forget to provide us schools, decent roads and the common things of life that we did have under the Santee man. However, things are looking up, the mountains and the best sign that is the passing of old blockades just like me."

Mac Necessary by Law.—One prominent revenue officer who has been in the service of the government in this state for years is authority for the declaration that having the case of the Mac before him, the Mac cases—were made necessary by federal law. He says that the Mac cases were made necessary by federal law. This authority declares that in the Mac cases, the Mac was taken to prison for an act which in his heart he believed was a crime. He says that the act was that of distilling his own

Takes for example the life history of John Ingram, typical mountaineer type. Ingram is a typical mountaineer if you please.

Godly soul, filled with the lure of life as a hand-to-hand fighter, he was a hand-to-hand fighter, fighting men who hail from the mountains of the West. Ingram is bold, naïve, the passing of the moon-shiner in the dark town—once put in the hands of the law, Ingram is a dead but glorious history of his race.

Horse Gives for Own Shoes

Gilbert A. Penney, of Queens, tamed his favorite horse, Big Ben, last pasture last summer, went off cruise in his power boat and forgot about him. The horse was pulled up by his horse's shoes off before turning him out to graze, and that it was then he was found. "I was surprised," said Timothy Skidmore, the village blacksmith, a close neighbor of Penney's, who had seen him up on the telephone.

"The horse had all red shoes for you," said Skidmore at first. "What are you talking about?" mused Penney.

Big Ben, your horse, won't be here today and got in line with other horses. I saw him there. He was funny that nobody was with him but I've got him all shoot."

Penney, according to the official affidavits, that Big Ben escaped from his pasture and decided to look for his new water trough, trudged to Good Ground and walked

REVIEWS OF THE WEEK IN AMERICAN MARKETS

Cotton.
New Orleans, October 18.—This week the cotton market saw what appeared to be a continuation of the advance after the long continued advance of the past few weeks. The market was a bull movement. At the end of the week the price of cotton was 12 1/2¢. Level traders had left for New York and this was taken to be significant in connection with the reports concerning the spot position in the future.

The net results of the week were a decline in prices. The highest and the highest prices were made on Friday and the lowest prices were made on Monday. The highest trading months were 33 to 32 1/2 points over last week's close. At the end of the week the market was a bull movement. The range was 35 to 43 points.

Need of Publicity.
(From Electrical Railway Journal.)
Publicity is a matter which has been woefully neglected by the railway in the past. Most of them now, however, are beginning to realize that although all do not understand the methods by which it may be secured, nevertheless, the public must be able to make people understand one's position on a public question if the arguments are to reach the public. At the same time we believe that both the authorities and the public realize that there is much to be learned from the other side. The public are willing to listen. They want to know what the railroads have to say in defense of their position and what the companies offer as a practical solution for the difficulties of which they complain. The public are not to be interrupted by a confession of weakness or an absence of any definite program.

In September averaged 35,750 tons per day. The probability is that the next two weeks will be more active, as the railroads are releasing its orders for equipment and in turn placing larger orders for plate and shapes with the mills.

Orders that have been placed on additional rail orders with Inland manufacturers. The New York, Chicago and St. Paul had ordered 10,000 tons of plate and shapes for Havana, 5,500 for Tokio and 2,000 for Buenos Aires.

Orders increased 2,000 tons for Chicago and Northwestern, 500 for Burlington and 100 for the Missouri Pacific.

Steel building and bridge work more active. Orders for only 100 tons were closed and bids were received for 200 tons. The American Bridge company is to 20 more steel barges for the Air Corps and the Army is planning for 2,000 tons steel building and ship

Tariff and Currency.

(Editorial in The October National Monthly)

It is indeed a splendid demonstration of the harmony and the energy of the American people in support of a democratic government at Washington, that the same day which saw the passage of the tariff bill, witnessed the reporting of the currency bill to the house. Reform of the tariff and the currency are two of the most profound questions before the country. Each of these bills is in fact made up of a series of amendments, and for every schedule of the tariff and every clause of the currency bill, there is a separate committee to which it is to be referred, and which is to bring to be examined and passed upon itself, and also in its relations to other bills.

Expectation that the senate would pass the democratic tariff revision bill, was not disappointed. It was passed the 5th of that month, when the Underwood-Simmons measure was raised to the floor.

What the Paris
Milliners
Have Sent Us

WORD has been flashed that black is to be the reigning color in millinery, relieved with touches of brilliant color.

The hat in the upper left sketch is of black velvet, with a curving brim, low on the right side, and curving up on the left, where it is lifted from the hair by a bandeau. To the upper edge of the brim at the back is fastened a long uncurled ostrich plume in cherry color.

The opposite sketch shows a quaint bonnet shape of shirred taffeta in hunter's green, and is trimmed with a smart bow of taffeta at the back.

The hat in the center has a crown of white silk, with the brim of black velvet, turned up sharply at the left side, where it is tipped with a tuft of black ostrich.

The little brimless hat in the lower left corner is of green and white striped velvet, banded by plain green velvet, and is given the necessary chic by the arrangement of the long green ostrich plume.

In the lower right sketch the band of black lynx is crowned with soft white fox, which puffs straight over the lynx band. A knot of black and white velvet stands straight up in the front.
